A GOLF TRIP OF A LIFETIME

Contributed by Michael O’Bryan, Member at The Cliffs Valley

Michael O’Bryan, a Member at The Cliffs Valley, recently returned from a two-week trip to South Africa where he was invited to play in the Blair Atholl Invitational Tournament, hosted by Gary Player. This charity golf tournament, formerly the Nelson Mandela Invitational, was organized by The Black Knight Foundation and benefits many of Mr. Player’s charities in South Africa.

The Blair Atholl course is a highly acclaimed design by Gary Player and measures over 8,000 yards from the professional tees. The first day was a one-day Pro-Am where O’Bryan was paired with Gary Player. For the weekend tournament, O’Bryan played with PGA TOUR player David Frost and Senior Tour player Bobby Lincoln. Following a full three-day event attended by PGA and Champions Tour players as well as businessmen from around the globe, the O’Bryan team tied for first place with the team led by PGA TOUR and Ryder Cup player Luke Donald.
While in South Africa, O’Bryan extended his stay by visiting several cities and attractions. The first night was spent at Mr. Player’s property at Blair Atholl, an expansive complex of large estate homes surrounding the new Gary Player Signature Course that opened to worldwide acclaim in early 2007. The following day O’Bryan traveled to Sun City, a spectacular resort that has two Gary Player-designed golf courses – Lost City (one of Mr. Player’s all-time favorite venues) and The Gary Player Country Club (host site of the 2007 HSBC Open).

His next stop was the five-million-acre Krueger National Park. The Crocodile River forms the southern border of the park and adjacent to the river is the Gary Player-designed Leopard Creek Country Club, known as the Augusta National of South Africa. Both Mr. Player and Jack Nicklaus enjoy homes at Leopard Creek.

The historical city of Cape Town –famous for its Wharf District, Table Mountain, and Robbin Island– was next on the agenda. Later that day, O’Bryan took a scenic drive up the east coast to the city of George, home of Ernie Els and the world famous golf development of Fancourt. Fancourt has four wonderful courses including the Gary Player-designed Links of Fancourt, which has the stately feel of Pinehurst.

“I have traveled and played golf all over the world and my favorite place to travel is South Africa.” -Michael O’Bryan

Flying privately to a destination of one’s choice is thought by many to be the ultimate way to travel. You travel on your own schedule. You avoid layovers and long lines at the airport. Your luggage never gets lost. Now, enjoying the benefits of private air travel is as easy as picking up the phone, thanks to The Cliffs’ new alliance with Marquis Jet.

Marquis Jet is the leader in private jet cards. The Marquis Jet Card program has been recognized as the number one private jet card program by industry-leading publications like Executive Travel and The Robb Report. Through its exclusive alliance with NetJets—a Berkshire Hathaway company known for providing the safest and most secure private aviation travel solutions worldwide—Marquis Jet provides the convenience, quality and safety of the world’s premier fractional aircraft ownership program in increments of 25 hours. The Card is for those who desire access to the world’s best fleet and service with no long term commitment.

"The introduction of this new service is a reflection of the company’s ever-present commitment to quality for the Members. If you took a poll and asked people what they value most, the majority of answers would relate to the concept of spending time with family and friends. The package of benefits we’ve created for The Cliffs’ Members through Marquis Jet was put together for that purpose. Whether you’re flying to and from your home at The Cliffs, or elsewhere, taking advantage of the exclusive services offered through the Marquis Jet Card program is undoubtedly going to enhance your traveling experience," states Scott Beville, President of Sales and Marketing at The Cliffs.

With the purchase of a 25-hour Marquis Jet Card, in as little as 10 hours’ notice, the Marquis Jet Owner Services team can arrange for NetJets to fly you to virtually anywhere in North America and Europe. Cliffs’ Members will have the ability to choose from one of 10 aircraft types available from NetJets fleet of over 720 aircraft, with the average aircraft age of less than five years.

A Marquis Jet Executive is available to provide Cliffs’ Members with a personal private aviation consultation, which will enable Marquis Jet to then recommend the best solution based on your travel preferences and needs. The best solution could range from the purchase of a NetJets fractional share, a 25 hour Marquis Jet Card or one-off trips through Executive Jet Management (a NetJets company).

An exclusive perk for Cliffs’ Members who purchase a 25-hour Marquis Jet Card is a $4,000 club credit from Marquis Jet that can be used at any of The Cliffs’ properties.

Safe, reliable, convenient private travel, every trip. What’s not to love?

Find out more about the exclusive benefits available to The Cliffs’ Members through the Marquis Jet Card program by calling (866) JET-1009. Learn more about the Marquis Jet Card program by visiting www.marquisjet.com.
One of the world's rarest wildflowers, whose fame was ensured from a mysterious search that took nearly 100 years to unfold, grows right in our own backyard. Oconee Bells are native to only a few places in the Blue Ridge Mountains of the Carolinas including Keowee River and its tributaries.

Clemson naturalist Patrick McMillan describes the history of this wildflower as being found by a man who didn't name it, named by a man who couldn't find it, and named for a man who never saw it.

In 1788 French botanist Andre Michaux discovered Oconee Bells while exploring the Southern Appalachians. Michaux preferred to spend his time in the field and died of fever 10 years after discovering Oconee Bells, never getting a chance to name the plant. Harvard botanist Asa Gray came across the Oconee Bells specimen in Michaux's French laboratory in 1829. The specimen was in a file titled “incognito” and the only description of the plant's location indicated it was found in “the high mountains of the Carolinas.”

Gray discovered many new species in the Carolina mountains, but Oconee Bells remained elusive. Every botanist traveling to this area searched unsuccessfully for the plant which began to take on mythical proportions. The search was known as the “holy grail” of botany. Finally in 1877, teenager George Hyam, the son of an herbalist, rediscovered the plant growing on the banks of the Catawba River near Marion, North Carolina. A sample from Hyam's collection made its way to Gray, who wrote about its rediscovery. Gray traveled to the site of Hyman's findings and finally got to see the Oconee Bells in bloom after searching for 50 years. Gray named the plant Shortia after his good friend, Kentucky botanist Charles Short, and galacifolia for its resemblance to galax.

This perennial herbaceous evergreen reproduces vegetatively, forming dense colonies. Oconee Bells grow at elevations of 900-1700 feet, in an acidic forest, along streams. To reproduce sexually, the seeds need exposed soil to germinate. Bare soil is rare in a heavily canopied forest making it difficult for colonies to spread. However, along stream banks where natural erosion and flooding occur, bare soil occurs, creating a frequent place for Oconee Bells to be found.

Oconee Bells are in the same family as the Galax, which are fairly common in the Appalachian mountain region. The plant is the only member of its genus in the United States, and its closest relatives are found in eastern Asia. This pattern of distribution is a common association between plants of east Asia and the eastern United States, signs of a distant past connected by land.

Oconee Bells, classified as a Federal Species of Concern, are protected from collection by North Carolina law. The creation of Lake Jocassee flooded approximately sixty percent of the original Oconee Bells populations. More recently, the loss of hemlock trees caused by the woolly aldegid infestation, and increased deer populations grazing on the remaining colonies cause concern to naturalists looking toward the future.

The white or pinkish five-petaled, bell-shaped flower blooms for just a few days in early spring. The flowering period for a colony is usually a week or two, and typically peaks in mid-March to early April. If you are interested in discovering the Oconee Bells on your own, populations grow in Keowee Vineyards along Cane Creek. Even the most novice naturalist can find the rare wildflower in Devil's Fork State Park - several colonies are featured along the one mile Oconee Bells Nature Trail.
Focus on EFFICIENCY

By Brad Fowler, Head Golf Professional, The Cliffs at Keowee Vineyards

Without question, one of the growing trends in golf is the focus on strength and golf conditioning. However, good swing technique is far greater than pure strength, or in other words, you should focus on efficiency.

Let’s consider how to become the most efficient with a driver, with set-up and swing as two key components, and remember it takes full body action to swing the driver well.

THE SET-UP:
- Tee the ball high and address it on line with the heel of your front foot.
- The stance should be quite wide to aid power and balance.
- Give yourself room to swing. Don't stand too close.
- Tilt your whole body away from the target as if you were on a slight up-hill slope. Your head should feel well behind the line of the ball.

THE SWING:
- To take the club away from address, swing the club back low, wide and easy. Make a full 90-degree shoulder turn to the top of the backswing at which point your back should be facing the target.
- Using method above combined with the proper set-up, you should sense most of your weight on the back leg.
- Now you are loaded and ready to fire. Turn the body through and finish balanced on your front foot.

Efficiency equals consistency, which is a must when hitting the driver. Play well.

A Taste of Chile. Espiritu de Chile!

Homeland of Chile's indigenous peoples, the Araucanians and the Mapuches, is the lush Lake District, and it is here that you will find Coastal Patagonia – home to The Cliffs Preserve at Patagonia. Chile boasts lush expanses of forest, a spectacular array of glaciers, fjords, extensive beaches, active volcanoes, and sparkling lakes. To Chile's remarkable geography, add culinary treasures and sumptuous wines - and you create an unprecedented experience.

The history of wine-growing in Chile began with the conquest of South America by the Spanish conquistadores 500 years ago. Today, Chile is home to a generation of vintners, and is internationally known as one of the most innovative wine-growing countries in the world. Like its wine, Chile is also acclaimed for its culinary innovations. Colorful maridaje, flavorful empanadas and cazuelas, and fresh seafood creations offer the perfect complement to renowned wines.

As a Member of The Cliffs, we invite you to join us for five days and four nights as The Cliffs Preserve Sommelier, Adolfo Estolaza, will present Chile's finest wines through a unique and interactive presentation each day. Then, let our Executive Chef, Pablo Galvez, tempt your senses each day with interesting cooking presentations, indigenous of cooking styles from the South of Chile. Chef Pablo has been recognized by the prestigious organization of Chefs, Le Toque Blanc for his ability to combine and present fresh, pure, native ingredients from both land and sea, in a most spectacular fashion.

In between culinary demonstrations, experience such amazing activities as a temperate rainforest hike, a penguin and sea lion colony visit and spectacular bird watching.

According to the American Physical Therapy Association, “nearly everyone experiences back pain at some time.” Increasing both the strength and flexibility of your muscles can help you improve and maintain the health of your back and other joints. The American College for Sports Medicine recommends stretching and other flexibility training to:

• Improve range of motion of joints
• Improve ability to do daily activities
• Reduce muscle fatigue and soreness
• Prevent injuries
• Increase circulation and air exchange
• Develop body awareness

WORK YOUR LEGS TO HELP YOUR BACK

The large muscle groups in your thighs, the hamstrings and quadriceps, attach directly to your pelvis. If one group is too tight or too weak, they can misalign your pelvis, tipping it too far forward or back, which can lead to a misaligned spine and joint pain.

HOW TO STRETCH

Stretching is a safe and accessible therapy that can alleviate back and joint pain by keeping your body in healthy alignment. Here’s a few simple guidelines: Move into and out of stretches slowly. Stretch until you feel resistance, pause, and hold for at least 10 seconds to up to one minute. Breathe deeply and slowly to increase your muscles’ (and your mind’s) ability to relax. You may be able to move deeper into the stretch. For guidance on the best stretches for your needs, ask a Cliffs Wellness professional for help.

WELLNESS CHALLENGE UPDATE

Wellness Challenge participants receive one Wellness Point for each day that they stretch for 15 minutes. Receive 100 Bonus Points by attending “Back and Joint Health,” a complimentary lecture by Duke Integrative Medicine at Glassy Clubhouse on Tuesday, March 4 at 6:00pm.

“All the world’s a stage, and all the men and women merely players,” wrote William Shakespeare. Fortunately for us in Greenville, some of those players are truly talented. You’ll find them on the stages of the Greenville community’s live theatres---two of which are featured below.

The Executive Directors of Centre Stage South Carolina and South Carolina Children’s Theatre recently expanded on three questions we posed:
1) What has you most excited about the balance of your season? 2) What are the greatest challenges you face? 3) Please share one wish you have for your artistic organization.

Centre Stage

Celebrating its 25th year, Centre Stage was founded with the intent of becoming a “professional,” rather than “amateur,” theatre. It has attained that goal and is now recognized as such by the Theatre Communication Group. Housed at 501 River Street, Centre Stage has become a familiar destination for area residents who value good local theatre--- The Cliffs’ residents among them.

Executive Director B.J. Koonce has difficulty singling out any one thing as being "most exciting" in 2008, Centre Stage’s Silver Anniversary Year. She quickly lists hosting the first juried exhibition of local art for Artisphere-Greenville’s international arts festival-- on April 3rd, The Greenville Symphony’s final Spotlight Series concert of the season the following day, and an April 5th woodworking workshop with Do-It-Yourself artist David Marks. May 3rd brings "Murder in May," the organization’s annual fundraiser.

Her greatest challenge? “As with any non-profit theatre,” she responds, “it’s financial support. And getting the word out that we’re here—even after 25 years!” But Centre Stage’s membership has more than doubled during Koonce’s time at the helm, and attendance is up. But so is the rent.

Thus, it’s not surprising that her foremost wish is for The Theatre to own its own space.

South Carolina Children’s Theatre

Funny thing. South Carolina Children’s Theatre Executive Director Debbie Bell has the very same wish. “I wish we had a home,” says Bell. “Currently, our offices and classes are in a temporary space, our set construction at another location, and our main stage performances take place at the Peace Center. Our goal is to one day have a building where all the parts of our organization are under one roof.”

Now in its 21st year, The South Carolina Children’s Theatre is not only a performance theatre, where children and adults alike are “part of the magic” of its productions, but an ongoing educational resource, providing theatre instruction to young people from ages three to 18 under the auspices of its Conservatory for Theatre Arts. Less known is SCCT’s Theatre Outreach Programs (TOPS), which offer no-cost educational dramatic arts opportunities for at-risk, disadvantaged, hospitalized, and special needs youngsters. SCCT is also home to the popular Kindermusik of Greenville, the international music education program for children newborn to seven years of age.

Bell’s greatest challenge is the misperception some have that SCCT’s performances are like recitals, and that they only feature child actors. Not the case.

She’s most excited about an upcoming, first-time show, “Seussical,” based on the works of Dr. Seuss. “It’s about the power of imagina-
